

One member was rather sceptical about the holes really being arrowhead shaped but I (Ed.) can assure all members that every hole is distinctly triangular with slight curving sides.

JACK BRANDT says he has seen something similar to this before (but as happens to us all - he cannot find it) but wondered at the time if it was due to brittle paper.

As to how to drill such a shape, how do you drill Fig. 1 - 'IH' from South Australia, with small slots and squares; or Fig.2 - 'IBNN' - solid cuts on a Nicaragua revenue stamp?
